50 thousand people in half a year have completed the new version of the CBA's anti-corruption e-learning course

From November 2017, the e-learning platform operates in a new, modernized form. For six months of its operation, a number of trainees was reached - which in the previous form of the platform was achieved in the course of four years. It was initially assumed that the course will be completed by approx. 4.5 thousand people a year. The counter showed the number of trainees already after two months. To this day, 47 thousand 767 people have completed the new version of the CBA's anti-corruption course.

The completely free e-learning platform provided by the Central Anticorruption Bureau has been operating for about 4 years. This is one of the few examples of such anti-corruption application in Europe. The e-learning platform raises the anti-corruption knowledge of the public and is one of the forms of counteracting corruption. The previous versions of e-courses was completed by a total of 65 thousand 191 people in 4 years.

The new course can be completed in about 2 - 3 hours. Some state offices and companies have now obliged their employees to complete such training. Foreign companies recommended the completion of such training to the employees of their Polish branches. Most people have obtained the "Corruption in public administration" e-training certificate - 20,000 people, "Counteracting corruption" training over 15 thousand, and "Corruption in business" - about 13 thousand people.

After the entry into force of the GDPR (General Data Protection Regulation), personal data are not collected when using the course. If it is necessary to pause the training, a special code is generated that allows you to return to the course, and start from the moment in which one left off. The certificate of completion of the course is printed by the graduates by entering their data.
